L U K E 11 : 3

Dear All

I was talking to Tony recently about the treats we buy ourselves and the pleasure we get from them.

He told me that he likes to buy software that lets him do creative things like editing the videos of our Sunday services. You might have seen them online. He certainly spends a lot of time using the software, and seems happy enough, if sometimes a little challenged, shall we say. But apparently every piece of software he's ever bought has been in some way or other a bit of a disappointment: it hasn't worked quite as well on our machines as he'd been led to believe, or hasn't had the flexibility he'd have liked. When I asked him why he went on buying it he replied that he enjoyed anticipating the performance of the new software and the hope that it would be just right for his purpose.

I, on the other hand, tend to buy simple but very high-quality kitchen equipment. One purchase was a new pastry brush. None of the wooden handle and bristles to shed all over the place, but a polymer handle and thick silicone threads in place of bristles. No shedding and a dream to wash! I get real joy from using it.

I suppose we each, in our way, are displaying healthy emotional and spiritual characteristics, Tony in his optimism, and me in my appreciation of simplicity.

Sue
